

The Dramatherapy Centre

A Body of Work and Play - Art Therapy and Dramatherapy Workshop

With Suzanne Perry and Joanna Jaaniste

Suzanne Perry and Joanna Jaaniste have worked together over a long period at Western Sydney University, starting in the late nineties and culminating in a relationship where we shared in the on-site supervision of MAT students, mostly in their final year of study. We have now designed an exciting weekend course which brings these two disciplines together, tracing the elements in the art making which can be brought through to embodiment, projection and roleplay, experienced by some readers as EPR (Jennings, 1973; 1993; 1999, pp. 51-53).

Through engagement with the art-making process, we will work experientially with participants, informing our work with theory throughout. This workshop is suitable for any Expressive Arts Therapists who wish to build their professional development and stimulate their own creative arts therapy practice.

Participants will be enabled to take away from the workshop:

- Knowledge and experiential mastery of the relationship between art therapy and dramatherapy methods and techniques
- Practical skills, understanding of and confidence in using action and play methods in the workplace with a range of client groups
- Theories of play and child and adulthood development
- Art therapy/Dramatherapy methods and techniques considered within a trauma model of care
